PREFATORY NOTE

This check list of eighteenth century American newspapers in the Library of Congress is issued partly for administrative convenience, but also with the purpose of rendering the collection of greater value to historians and others interested in such material.

In the bibliographical note following the caption and preceding the record of the Library of Congress file, changes of title, printer, publisher, or editor, etc., are given under the earliest date under which they appear upon any issue in this collection. Occasionally these data are supplemented by information obtained from other sources. Continuations under a new title, or new publications superseding defunct papers are entered under their own titles, with a note connecting them.

Librarians and others using the list will be able to supply additional bibliographical information concerning the titles listed. The Library will gratefully receive such information, together with corrections of any errors that may appear in the bibliographical notes.

Any duplicates of eighteenth century American newspapers in possession of the Library will be exchanged for papers of the same period needed in its files, and correspondence is invited to this end.
